The Democratic Party and the Late Rebellion

(From the New York Tribune.)

The circumstance that a Member of Congress is branded a liar for stating in his place that very many Democrats were rebels, traitors with and virtual allies of the late Rebellion compels us to ask attention to certain historical facts. If any one can contradict them or break their force we beg him not to hide his candle under a bushel.

I. Secession was first inaugurated in South Carolina directly after the result of the Presidential Election early in November, 1860, whereby the accession of Mr. Lincoln to the Presidency was assured. The men who inaugurated it were all Democrats—that is, they had supported for President Van Buren in 1840, Polk in 1844, Cass in 1848, Pierce in 1852, Buchanan in 1856, and J. C. Breckinridge in 1860. There may have been one or two exceptions, but we know of none. There was certainly no Republican among them, whether in that or any other State. And whatever their special excuses, the pretext for it was the triumph of the Republicans in the choice of Mr. Lincoln aforesaid.

II. Other States—at first ten of them—followed South Carolina in her so called secession. Two or three more pretended or were claimed to have done so. In every instance this so called secession was substantially the act of the Democratic party of those States respectively. That is to say the great body of those who had previously "run the Democratic machine" were early and ardent secessionists, while the mass of the opposite party was either adverse or lukewarm. Thus, every Democratic Governor of a State (those of Delaware and Kentucky excepted) was at the head of the hunt for Disunion, and, of the exceptions each openly contemned all forcible resistance to the movement.

III. The Federal Government was then wholly in the hands of the Democratic party, save that the House of Representatives was tied—Wm. Pennington (moderate Republican) having at length been chosen a Speaker by one majority. But in no single department did that Government oppose any earnest resistance to secession. President Buchanan in his Message of December 3, 1860, squarely proclaimed that Congress had no right to use force to prevent the withdrawal of a State from the Union, nor to compel her to yield obedience to its laws. To do this he argued, would be to make war upon a State which Congress had no constitutional power to do. (See American Conflict, Vol. I., p. 370.) This proclamation of national anarchy was backed by an opinion from his Democratic Attorney General, Jere S. Black, who was afterwards his Secretary of State, who affirmed that the use of arms and men to enforce the laws, in the existing state of things, would be "wholly illegal." He further urged that an attempt to make a seceded State fulfill her Federal obligations would be ipso facto "an expulsion of such State from the Union." (The very sophistry which we hear every day from the Democrats of 1867.)

IV. During that memorable winter Democratic conventions were held in several States—that in this State, (held in Tweddle Hall, Albany, Jan. 31, 1861) being one of the ablest and strongest that was ever convened. But from none of these Conventions, nor from the Democrats in Congress, nor from the thousand to fifteen hundred Democratic journals published in the country, was a voice raised in deprecation of, or dissent from, these disorganizing doctrines. On the contrary they were re-echoed and almost universally acquiesced in.

V. Seven States having seceded before Mr. Buchanan's term expired, their Democratic members vacated their seats in Congress with very rare exceptions. Of their few anti-Democratic members, nearly or quite every one remained to the close.

VI. Mr. Lincoln was inaugurated on the 4th of March, 1861, and his Inaugural Address was mainly devoted to the refutation of doctrines regarding secession and coercion, the exact opposites of Messrs. Buchanan and Black's. Mr. Lincoln was well known to hold (as we did and do) the right of the people to modify or change their form of government as transcending all written constitutions or charters; but he with great clearness and cogency, yet in perfect kindness, demonstrated that the President must to the utmost limit of his ability cause the laws of the Union to be respected and obeyed in every State and Territory—that, should a collision of forces result, his position would be strictly defensive and conservative—that the consequent war would be made upon him and not by him. Never was a manifesto more firm and lucid—never was one less irritating. Either its doctrines were sound or any State might at any time dissolve the Union. Yet of the five hundred Democratic journals within our reach, we believe no single one approved and sustained the positions of Mr. Lincoln.

VII. Throughout that winter and the ensuing spring, all the Democratic organs within our observation, reprobated Mr. Lincoln and the Republicans as disturbers and disunionists because of their intent to oppose force by force if that should become necessary to maintain the integrity and authority of the Union. We can recall no instance of Democratic rebuke to those who were openly, ostentatiously conspiring, and arming to resist the Union, which they proclaimed already dissolved.

VIII. A Confederacy of the seceded States having been formed, leading Northern and Western Democrats openly advocated the secession of their several States from the Union and their accession to the Southern Confederacy. "If the Union is to be dissolved," said Judge George W. Woodward, Democratic candidate for Governor in 1863, "I want the line to run north of Pennsylvania." Ex-Gov. Rodman M. Price, of New Jersey, wrote and published a letter elaborately urging that New Jersey should forthwith unite her fortunes with those of the slaveholding Confederacy. (See it in American Conflict, Vol. I., p. 139.) And Ex-Gov. Horatio Seymour, of this State, privately argued that New York should likewise unite with that Confederacy whose head was Jefferson Davis. It was held by leading Democrats that the Union might thus be reconstructed without bloodshed or convulsion—only New England, and two or three of the more fanatical States of the Northwest being excluded therefrom, as unacceptable to our Southern brethren.

IX. Actual hostilities were commenced by the rebels—not by firing on Fort Sumter, as is often asserted and as Pollard now pretends, but months before, while Mr. Buchanan was yet President. They seized and appropriated the forts, arsenals, armories, ordnance, arms, munitions, post offices, custom houses, sub treasuries, &c., throughout nearly half the Union, without a shadow of resistance—his Democratic Secretaries of War and the Treasury being conspicuous active disunionists and he himself, with most of his counselors, playing into their hands. Before Texas was out of the Union, according to rebel computation the bulk of our little army had been betrayed by its commander, General Twiggs, and surrendered to the three rebel Commissioners—February 18, 1861—a fortnight before Mr. Buchanan went out of office. If ever a Government forbore till smitten on both cheeks, and till tobacco juice had been spit into its eyes, that did the Government before grappling with the slaveholders' rebellion. And yet from first to last the Democratic journals and canvassers represented the war for the Union as waged by Mr. Lincoln and the Republicans, and assumed that the rebels were assailed and standing on the defensive!

X. Democratic protests and remonstrances public and private, against the war as cruel, fratricidal, wicked, revolting, abhorrent, &c., &c., were abundant throughout the struggle, not one of them, so far as we can recollect, addressed to the rebel chief, but all assuming that Mr. Lincoln and the Republicans were waging hostilities needlessly if not wantonly, and might have an honorable peace whenever they would. Thomas H. Seymour of Connecticut, was the author of the earliest of these paralyzing missives and he was nominated by acclamation by the Democrats of Connecticut as their candidate for Governor in 1863 and his election enthusiastically supported by the party.

XI. In this city, one of our Democratic journals the Daily News, was an open, unqualified contemner of the War on our side and champion of the Rebellion from first to last. It did its utmost to prevent enlistment in the Union armies, eulogized the rebel chiefs and proclaimed that they could never be subdued, systematically magnified their successes and denied or belittled their reverses, and was well understood to be their stipendiary and tool. In full view of these facts, its editor was in 1862 made the regular Democratic candidate for Congress in one of our strong Democratic districts, running on the same ticket with Gov. Seymour and receiving nearly the full vote of his party and he has since been chosen by that party to a seat in our State Senate.

XII. As to the propositions, speeches, acts and votes of Vallandigham, Bayard, Bright, May, Josh. Allen, Jack Rogers and other Democrats in Congress including Long and Harris, we trust that the recollection cannot nor ought to be put down: we leave them to Mr. Ashley or whoever shall see fit to answer Messrs. Winfield and Hunter not according to their folly. Just a word however to the former of these gentlemen. One of the very foremost Democrats in his district is (or was) Gen. Archibald C. Niven, who very early in this war wrote a letter to a nephew who indicated an inclination to fight for the Union, urging him not to do so, and representing the war in some degree as cruelly oppressive and unjust. That letter was published and thereupon Gen. Niven was made the Democratic candidate for the Senate in Mr. Winfield's precise district, and received the full Democratic vote, by which he was returned elected; but the Senate on a contest gave the seat to his Republican competitor, Judge Low.

We might multiply such facts to thirty fold, but need we? Suffice it that as the result of a most anxious, intent contemplation of the history of our recent struggle, we do most unfeignedly believe that the Democrats as a party were not at heart for the Union in its terrible struggle with secession—that they did not rejoice at its triumphs nor deplore its defeats. We do not say that a majority of them wished the Union permanently dissolved: we do not and have often insisted, that they did not; but they believed that Union defeats and disasters would discredit and destroy the Republican ascendancy, and that they would thereupon come into power and coax the rebels back into the Union by all manner of concessions and prostrations to the Slave Power. They had no notion that the Union could (or should) be saved otherwise than by letting the slaveholders have their way in it, and the road to this they realized, by not through Union victories but the contrary.

Firmly grounded in this conviction are we at liberty to proclaim it? Do we deserve to be knocked down and stamped on wherever we say what we believe? or only to be branded as liars? What say you, Messrs. Winfield and Hunter?

THE WOUNDS OF RIFLE BULLETS IN BATTLE.—There is in the museum of the Army Medical Department a very interesting specimen of a bullet connected with a wound of the head, and exhibiting nearly one complete turn on its long axis after it had been thus caught and lodged. This bullet, a Russian conical bullet, has been divided in its really course by an oblique slit from the apex or tip to the base, and the two divided parts are only held together by a narrow isthmus of lead at one of the angles of the base of the section. But that is not all—this isthmus or connecting strip is twisted round itself like a piece of cord, carrying with it the thinner section of the bullet, or that section which was not easily acted upon by the twisting force. There are ridges and furrows on the separated surfaces of the bullet, and they are contorted from the right to the left, indicating the direction towards which the rotary force of the projectile had modified the direction of the twisting force. Here we have the demonstration of the influence of the spinning property of a rifle bullet in motion first detected, we believe, by Deputy Inspector General Thomas Longmore, Professor of Military Surgery, Army Medical School. Although, when the spinning force is first impressed upon the projectile it is limited by the degree of spirality of the grooves of the bore to one turn in a distance varying from twenty inches to seventy eight inches, according to the rifle used, yet there seems to be reason for believing that the degree of turn, or the distance within which a complete spin takes place, constantly lessens from the time the projectile quits the muzzle of the barrel, owing to the greater opposition to the forward motion than to the spinning motion in the passage through the air. At any rate, when the forward motion is stopped, or nearly stopped, by a substance capable of opposing sufficient resistance, the shortened turn is in certain cases rendered obvious to sight, and it is under such circumstances that the fact is of importance to surgeons. * * * The general conclusion drawn by Dr. Longmore is if elongated projectiles such as the Whitworth bullets were substituted for the Enfield, First—that the number of head and trunk wounds would be greatly increased, the amount of increase being proportional to the velocity and greater flatness of the Whitworth hexagonal projectile. Secondly—that of these wounds a greater proportion than now usually happens in war would be attended with fatal results on the field of battle. Thirdly—that there would be in like proportion, a greater number of fractures of bones, as well as of flesh wounds of the extremities, but the comparative degree of severity of these can hardly be stated without further experience.—United Service Magazine.

THE EXTRAORDINARY ESCAPE.—A few years ago an ill fated vessel, the Star of Dundee, after being tossed uncontrollably by the raging sea was hopelessly driven upon a dreadful looking block of hard rock at the foot of the Craig. Of course she quickly went to pieces, and the unfortunate crew perished. One young man, however, named Henry Johnson, after struggling ineffectually with the waves, was washed into a hole in the Craig, which in the lapse of centuries has evidently been hollowed out by the sea. The bottom part, or the floor as it were, of this hollow slopes upward into the interior of the rock, though its mouth or aperture is closed at high tide by each succeeding wave. In this situation he actually existed four days and nights, his sensations for four hours out of the six, when he expected every moment to suffocate, being simply indescribable. As a curious and providential circumstance, there floated to him from the wreck a barrel of herrings, a feather mattress and a small tin mug. By the first he obtained sustenance. The mattress he cut open and stuffed the feathers into his boots for warmth, and with the mug he caught the water as it dripped from the roof of his cell. Driven to desperation he at last attempted and actually scaled the Craig at a point where it makes the blood run cold to survey. When he appeared in town where he is well known, upon a Sunday morning and sparely clothed the inhabitants fled before him, supposing him a spectre from the dead. Thanksgivings were offered up in the churches for his safe deliverance and all testified by their universal sympathy their astonishment at his marvelous escape.—Crichton's Ramble to the Orcades.

A SIGNIFICANT FACT.—The evidence in the case arising out of the recent murderous assault on Chinese laborers in this city shows that the rioters were not men who were suffering for want of employment as their sympathizers have asserted, by reason of Chinese being hired in their places. On the contrary the greater part of them, if not all of them, had to quit work in which they were actually engaged, some of them against the prohibition and remonstrance of their employers, in order to join in the attack on the inoffensive Mongolians against whom their prejudices were so unreasonably excited. How completely this significant fact disposes of all the demagogue rhetoric about suffering labor driven from its task by coolies and forced home at night without bread! It is to be hoped we shall hear of no more such drivel unless the parties who utter it are ready to make up a fund to reimburse the city for the damages it may be compelled to pay to those who suffer in person or property at the hands of mobs, incited by such mischievous falsehoods.—Bulletin.

ANCIENT POLITICAL HISTORY.—A New York paper publishes a two column article, which the Herald says reads like an obituary, on the subject of the late Democratic organization. That paper very truly remarks that the Democracy under its old leaders and advisers has done badly enough and foolishly enough and its friends should be the last to rake up its errors and its follies out of the oblivion to which it has been consigned. If the real Democrats, who believe in the true principles of the party, will sweep aside all those who have been instrumental in breaking down their former organization and will take a new departure, with a new organization recognizing the great fact of the war and its consequences, and accepting the verdict of the loyal people on the subject of reconstruction, they may yet have a future before them full of promise and of profit. But if they continue to run in the old rut, and allow the worn out hacks of the party to draw the machine, and to control its course, they must make up their minds to be set aside with Andy Johnson, and removed as obstructions to the onward progress of the Nation.

[DISPATCHES TO THE OREGONIAN.]

DATES TO MARCH 12.

Congressional.

WASHINGTON, March 11.—In the Senate, Wilson of Mass. rose to present a petition signed by over 800 citizens of Alexandria, Va., for the annexation of that city to the District of Columbia; referred.

Williams of Oregon presented a bill to provide for the registration of voters in the Territories; referred.

Sumner, of Massachusetts, introduced a bill to provide for the adjustment and satisfaction of claims of American citizens for depredations committed by the French prior to July, 1801, being the bill of last session; referred.

Grimes of Iowa, introduced a joint resolution to authorize the settlement of accounts for extra pay granted to officers, seamen and marines of the Navy who served in the Pacific, [illegible] by the naval appropriation bills of August 1862 and March 1863; referred.

Wilson, of Mass., introduced a resolution instructing the Military Committee to inquire whether the sale of arms and munitions and vessels to belligerent powers [illegible] is lawful and whether the rights [illegible] cannot be secured by legislation, and retaliation [illegible]; agreed to.

Sumner of Mass., called up a resolution introduced by him on Thursday, March 7, declaring that certain further guarantees are required in the reconstruction of the rebel States. After considerable debate, Frelinghuysen, of New Jersey, said that three of the points in the resolution are covered in the supplementary bill of Wilson, which was referred to the Judiciary Committee of the Senate. He moved to lay the resolution on the table. Carried—ayes 34, noes 10. Adjourned.

In the House several bills were introduced and referred. A resolution introduced by Bromwell of Pennsylvania, instructing the Judiciary Committee to enquire whether further legislation is necessary to give the U. S. Courts jurisdiction of offenses committed on other waters than the high seas, was adopted.

A resolution was offered by Kelly of Pennsylvania declaring that the proposition that the war debt of the country should be extinguished by the generation which contracted it is inconsistent with sound principles of national economy and does not meet with the approval of this House. The House refused to second the previous question by [illegible] 63. The resolution was referred to the Committee on Ways and Means when appointed.

Williams of Pennsylvania introduced a bill to regulate the practice and define the powers of the Supreme Court of the United States in cases arising under the Constitution and laws thereof.

Special Committee on the Niagara Ship Canal—Van Horn of New York, chairman; Cook of Illinois, Stevens of Pennsylvania, Washburn of Massachusetts and Munger of Ohio.

Wilson of Iowa, from the Judiciary Committee, reported a bill calling State conventions for organizing State governments in the rebel States. It is the bill introduced by Wilson of Massachusetts in the Senate last Thursday.

The bill gave rise to considerable discussion, but was passed by a vote of ayes 117, noes 27.

Donnelly, of Minnesota, offered a preamble and resolution giving encouragement and sympathy to the Irish revolutionists.

Stevens, of Pennsylvania objected.

Pending a motion to suspend the rules the House adjourned.

The dismissed clerks of the last session are making very strenuous endeavors to prevail on members to introduce new ones so that commissioners may be appointed, notwithstanding the caucus agreement, and there is a strong pressure for more.

The two hundred and fifty thousand dollars in gold belonging to the Richmond banks, captured with Davis, and now stored in the Treasury, is likely to occasion legislation. The agents of the banks obtained an order from the President to the Treasurer to turn it over, taking bonds for the delivery of the same if called for by Congress or the Courts. The Treasurer assured the bank officers that their bonds would be satisfactory to him, and finally refused to deliver the gold. The committee on retrenchment will investigate the matter.

CHICAGO, March 12.—The Southern district commanders are not yet appointed. The President hesitates to appoint Sheridan, because he is too much of a soldier and too little of a politician for the place. Sheridan is largely considered, and will probably be appointed.

Virginia Reconstruction.

NEW YORK, March 11.—The Richmond Times, alluding to the unanimity of the Senate in passing the bill for the holding of a Constitutional Convention in Virginia, says: "The reasons which induced this unexpected result we are not at liberty to publish, but when made known they will we believe justify too bitter and almost unpalatable dose which the gentlemen swallowed from a sense of overwhelming duty to their constituents."

By a more careful reading of the reconstruction act it is ascertained that the military commandants shall be Generals of the regular army. Therefore Sickles is eligible. There is reason for the belief that Sherman, Hancock, Schofield and Sickles will be selected.

John Minor Botts has written a letter under date of March 7, to a prominent Congressman in which he states that the rebel legislature of Virginia will fix the first Tuesday in May for holding a Constitutional Convention; that the rebel forces are thoroughly organized and will certainly control the Convention unless a registration law and provisions for voting by ballot are provided at the present session of Congress. He says not one fifth of the colored people are aware of their right to vote at the ensuing election and the Union people implore Congress not to adjourn before providing the legislation suggested.

An effort will be made in the present Congress to establish a joint Committee on Ordnance, it being alleged that the system enforced in the Ordnance department is ruinous to all attempts at improvement in that branch of the service.

The Herald special dispatch says it is given out that the President has made up his mind to enforce the reconstruction act faithfully and will not offer any obstruction to carrying out the laws of any kind.

Gould and Crump have returned to Virginia. Before leaving here they were advised by the President not to call any convention, but to leave that duty to the military commander. This will defeat the bill in the Virginia House of Delegates to-morrow.

Parties at the South.

NEW YORK, March 12.—The Times special says two distinct parties are at work in every Southern State to organize conventions under the reconstruction bill. The one [illegible] of Union men says, however, that the disqualification of the reconstruction bill is not comprehensive enough to insure the safety of the Union cause, as many men now in office will be able to take the proscribed oath and secure elections. In Georgia there is a thorough organization of the freedmen and Gov. Brown's party has joined forces with them. In South Carolina, Mississippi, Alabama, Florida, Louisiana and Texas, the organizations are not so complete, but their ramifications are being rapidly extended throughout every county. On the other hand, the class who fill offices at present, were all organized.

The matter is attracting the attention of the press, who warn applicants for information against deception. The New York Sun has received scores of communications, and it says it has been engaged in investigating the matter. Inquiries have been made which convince us that hundreds of persons will be induced to part with their greenbacks upon representations similar to those of the Gift Enterprise operators. We have satisfied ourselves that this emigration scheme will be found unprofitable to those who invest the five dollars demanded.

NEW YORK, March 12.—The New York Times to-day, in an editorial condemns the interference of the Government with the Mormons at Salt Lake, and says that no reliance is to be placed in the statement that Mormons imperil the safety of Gentile life or interfere with Gentile enterprise or industry. The polygamy of Mormons is not worse than the prostitution abounding in anti Mormon cities. They are opposed by hordes of lazy adventurers and shiftless and reckless bummers who come in contact with them. The Times deprecates the [illegible] of the Philadelphia Press and other radical journals which call for stern legislation on the polygamy question.

Court or People?

In his first inaugural address, President Lincoln said "The candid citizen must confess that if the policy of the Government upon vital questions affecting the whole people, is to be irrevocably fixed by decisions of the Supreme Court the instant they are made in ordinary litigation between parties in personal actions, the people will have ceased to be their own rulers having to that extent practically resigned their Government into the hands of that eminent tribunal" This is a clear statement of an obvious fact It is manifestly impossible to concede this great power in all cases to the Supreme Court without depriving the people of the right to govern themselves

To decide political questions or questions having a political bearing does not properly fall within the province of the Supreme Court It was originally intended that questions of this kind should be referred to the legislative branch of the Government Thus, in earlier times, we had no political decisions by the Supreme Court Congress exercised the right of pronouncing upon such cases In this way political questions were kept within reach of the people But they are no longer within reach of the people if entrusted to the Supreme Court, and if the decisions of that tribunal in regard to them, are to be held irrevocable.

Whether a State has an established government, is a political question, and one for Congress to determine This was the opinion of the Supreme Court in the Rhode Island case Congress is made the judge of the qualifications of its own members, and therefore of the right of the communities for whom these members appear, to representation If it is objected that this is a great and dangerous power, and liable to be abused by the legislative branch of the Government the reply is ready that it would be even more liable to abuse if lodged with the judiciary For Congress is near the people, it is gathered from all parts of the country, and represents the interests of all classes The Supreme Court, on the contrary, is not amenable to the people, nor removable by them. Is power more likely to be abused by a large body of men who are directly responsible to the people, than by nine or ten judges who are under no responsibility to any superior power? The principles enunciated in the Rhode Island case are applicable to the present situation of affairs in the country They justify the course Congress has taken and establish the right of that branch of the Government to control the subject of State restoration.

In 1857 the Supreme Court descended from the position it had previously occupied, and took part in a political contest. The decision in the Dred Scott case appeared. The action of the Court in this case impaired the reverence of the people for that tribunal in no small degree Where is this decision now? Those who hailed its appearance with delight need not now be reminded that it is not law. Through all time it will never be quoted as law. It is now simply an object of contempt. Judges who concurred in that decision, and who still occupy seats on the Supreme bench, are not yet free from the odium which they brought upon themselves by their course in that case. And when they now assume to decide political questions, they are remembered by the people as judges who ten years ago put forth a decision which from the first was infamous, and which is now annulled That the opinions of these judges on political questions have little weight with the people, is therefore not a matter of surprise

When the Supreme Court places itself in hostility to the will of the people, it is clear that if its decision is irrevocable, the Court, or a majority thereof, practically governs the country Thus five judges may become the supreme rulers of the land President Lincoln's remarks on this subject evince his wisdom, and show how deeply he had reflected on the constitutional distribution of the powers appertaining to the several branches of the Government.

Frankly Avowed

The Umatilla Press, the organ of the Democracy of Eastern Oregon, thus defines its position

> We believe in the Union as it was, and the Constitution as our fathers made it. We believe in carrying out the original object of the war, namely—to restore the Union as it was, with the rights of all States unimpaired This idea militates as strongly against the imposition of conditions on the Southern States by the President, as against those imposed by Congress The Supreme Court has in effect decided that all amendments to the Constitution originated by a minority, and forced upon the South as conditions precedent to representation, are unconstitutional and void Cannot the Herald invoke the aid of these 'fixed principles,' and follow them to their "logical conclusion"? Does he for one moment claim that any of the Constitutional amendments which have been forced upon the South, as well as those now sought to be imposed upon them, would stand one moment before an honest and impartial Supreme Court? The institution of slavery as a distinguishing feature of the Southern society, may be dead. The war killed it the same as it destroyed bales of cotton, burned towns and cities, but the law and the conditions imposed by an ungrateful Tennesseean, as President, have not destroyed it.

These opinions have, at least, the merit of candor. They contain plain and positive propositions and in this respect differ widely from the utterances of those trimmers whose study it is to dress their real sentiments in such shapes and disguises as will serve to render them less odious to those who read and hear them. It is an undoubted fact that the views expressed in the above extract are held by a large majority of the party which the writer serves The return of that party to power would re-open, and eventually reverse, every question that has been decided by the war The Press unqualifiedly asserts that slavery is not abolished. This idea is very generally prevalent in its party It is well for the people not to lose sight of these things. If the aims and objects of the party which holds these ideas are kept constantly in view, there will be no danger of further trouble from its machinations The people, as they value peace, will not trust it again

EARTHQUAKE IN MITYLENE.—Not long since a terrible earthquake occurred in Cephalonia, anciently known as Samos, one of the islands of the Grecian Archipelago Two or three days ago another of these terrible visitations took place in Mitylene whereby hundreds of people were swallowed up. The island of Mitylene in ancient times was called Lesbos, and is celebrated by the old poets and historians. It lies near the coast of Asia Minor, and has an area of about 300 square miles It was the birthplace of the poetess Sappho In the middle ages it passed under Mohammedan domination In the modern Greek struggle for independence it suffered severely, losing nearly half its inhabitants It still belongs to Turkey

The power of migratory fish to adapt themselves to circumstances is curiously illustrated in the history of the land locked salmon The salmon, as everybody knows ascends the streams every year, deposits its eggs, and then returns to the ocean In some rivers the construction of dams and other obstacles, has prevented the return of the fish to the sea. In these cases they have remained in the head waters of the streams ceased their migratory habits and become wholly a fresh water fish In some of the streams of New England they have thus remained for years The people there are giving much attention to the propagation of them

SHOES VS SANDALS.—Professor Seely thus writes in the Scientific American

In the state of nature the feet of man are the least vital parts of his body, and as they were intended to perform heavy service, they were endowed with extraordinary powers of endurance But fashion and art long ago ignored these good designs of nature, and now our feet are proverbially weak and sore Every one at some time has his corns, or that other disease quite as common, which makes his presence hateful to his best friend Although the feet are not the seat of fatal disease yet they are the open portal which invites to the lungs its most terrible enemy We learn from the ancient poets that the feet were regarded as objects of beauty, but now our feet are so pinched out of shape that we may search a long time for a well formed foot, unless we go to the ancient statuary, or among the semi barbarians of the East

This state of things did not exist in ancient times, if corns had been invented in his time Job would surely have told us about it And at the present day the poor Indian of untutored mind knows nothing of our fashionable diseases Corns and mis-shapen feet are incidents of modern civilization

Such a statement of the case as this is sufficient to suggest to the minds of most people, the cause and perhaps a remedy. The radical view of the subject is, that the cause is leather and the remedy is sandals, leather obstructs the healthful perspiration and ventilation of the feet almost as effectually as would sheet iron, the feet need no more protection than the hands or the face, down with leather. But I am no radical The fashion of centuries is too respectable to be dealt with in a violent way "Nothing like leather" has been too long a household proverb to be forgotten in a day

It is entirely practicable, however, to institute the beginning of reformation without making ourselves obnoxious to the reasonably fastidious Thus We may refuse to wear shoes which pinch us or tend to press the feet out of shape, we may prefer thin porous leather, and wear cloth shoes whenever fashion will permit us And we may think of the reform and reason upon it with our neighbors In these little ways, we shall strengthen ourselves in the faith and hasten so much of the millennium as pertains to the feet

In my opinion here is to be a fruitful field for the inventor I suggest a few problems How to make leather less unsuitable for shoes Better ways of uniting cloth uppers to leather soles How to weave a shoe and attach a sole The best fiber for a cloth shoe? How to protect the feet from rain and yet secure ventilation To make a shoe of net work, or of perforated leather

STANDS UP FOR THE FIRST FAMILIES.—The Montgomery (Ala.) Mail is very indignant at the "Yankee writing for the North American Review" who has attempted so sacrilegiously to destroy the romantic reputation of Pocahontas After combating the evidence offered, the editor says "The story may or may not be true, but the object with which the Yankee writer, and the newspapers of the North, have reproduced it, is contemptible The beauty of the life of Pocahontas does not consist in the single incident of Smith's captivity, but in her constant friendship for and protection of the English, in her gentle character and conspicuous piety The Yankees laugh at the man who can boast of descent from the noble woman who, born a savage, became an ornament to the British Court Yet the man who is descended from Pocahontas could not boast a nobler parent The descendants of Jane Bolling, the daughter of Pocahontas have illustrated the history of the South We find them among the Lees, the Randolphs the Harrisons the Bollings the Halls, the Pages, Carters, and indeed many other families, the conduct of whose sons in the council chamber, and on the battle field has done honor to their ancestress the Princess Rebecca The Yankee has torn away our flag and may tear away our Constitution, but, thank God he can never tear away the precious memories of our people"

MERCURY IN HUMAN REMAINS.—A French journal relates a story of a wealthy farmer who died many years ago, and on digging a grave in close proximity to where he had been buried, the bones were accidentally exhumed On examination, brilliant particles of a metallic lustre were found, which, on being collected presented a considerable quantity of oxide of mercury Thus for thirty five years the mercury had been preserved almost without alteration in the body of deceased, who had probably made frequent use of the metal during the latter part of his life.

IS IT A JOKE?—At a recent meeting of the Boston Numismatic Society, a silver dollar of Maximilian, Emperor of Mexico was exhibited The Emperor's peculiar beard is so drawn as to present, when the coin is reversed, the appearance of the head of a donkey The members entered into a curious and learned discussion as to whether this was to be an intentional piece of satire on the part of the artist but it is not improbable that it may have been caused by the difficulty of representing the style of beard worn by his Majesty

GOOD.—At Frankfort lately the 'Merchant of Venice' was played at one of the theaters and when in the trial scene, the judge asked Shylock 'what he claimed from his debtor and the latter replied 'A pound of flesh,' a man in the gallery cried out, And eight cigars The Frankfort people applauded this allusion to the Prussian bill of fare during the war; the Prussians present lost their temper a disturbance ensued and the police cleared the house

GRAPE CROP.—The most reliable statistics of the grape crop of last year in California estimating at San Francisco prices was in round numbers, about $1,000 000 near $1 000,000 of which was manufactured into wine and brandy $200,000 worth or one fifth of the production was exported These matters should be carefully watched by those who regards California as destined to be a great if not the finest grape growing section in the world

Mr Boutwell recently said that 'the President might open all the jails and penitentiaries in the land with his pardons, but while he had a seat in the House he would never admit that the President's pardon gave a traitor the right to enter the bar of the court and assist in administering justice " To this sentiment the country responds

Oregon City Oil Manufacturing Company

Articles of incorporation for the Oregon City Oil Manufacturing Company were filed in accordance with the law governing joint stock incorporations on Tuesday last Dr F Barclay George Larocque William Barlow John H Moore George Marshall, Samuel L Stevens and D M McKenney, appear as incorporators The capital stock of the company has been fixed at $40 000 in $100 each

At a meeting of the incorporators held on the 5th and which organized by electing Dr F Barclay chairman and D M McKenney secretary Mr Samuel L Stevens was appointed agent of the incorporators to open books and take subscriptions to the capital stock of the company Mr John H Moore of Salem and Mr William Barlow of Oregon City were also appointed agents to procure 1 500 bushels of flax seed for distribution among farmers the coming season the same to be by the farmers returned the following autumn The meeting adjourned to meet at the office of D M McKenney in this city on Monday the 25th inst, at one o clock P M

This is going to work in earnest and no person can doubt that the enterprise will succeed and be a gratifying success to the parties interested Those owning stock in the company will be likely to realize a handsome profit on their investment and as we have before stated the farmer will have a new and extended avenue to wealth opened up for him and other classes in the community will be benefitted by an increase of business In fact there is no other enterprise in which our citizens can engage, that will be more generally beneficial than this

The movement to procure seed for distribution in the manner proposed by the company is a good one By this means farmers can procure seed for a starter without an outlay of money and they can make the experiment of growing flax upon very favorable terms

It may be well enough to remark here that practical flax growers inform us that one half bushel of seed to the acre is sufficient and that an acre will produce from twelve to fifteen bushels of seed and staple (or lint) to the amount of from 400 to 500 pounds to the acre It will not be a great while until we shall have a Linen Manufacturing Company in our midst At present the Paper Manufacturing Company will require more or less of the staple flax —Enterprise

SITKA CORRESPONDENCE.—John Bigler of California, the man who did not become an Assessor of Internal Revenue in that State, not long ago wrote to Senator Conness, complaining of the treatment he had received In reply the Senator wrote as follow

You complain of the treatment received from some of our most distinguished citizens and appeal to me against their judgment and you send me enclosures concerning your political record in your vindication I am only astonished that you should have done this knowing as you must that your whole political course in California is familiar to me You will pardon a brief reference to it

The men who wished California to remain a free State, for a time put you forward as a representative man, and thus you obtained great prominence in the State How unwise the selection how false you proved and how unworthy of their favor, has found universal acceptation.

It is a small matter who shall be Assessor but no man can expect to enter the political heaven who is unclean The example if it were possible, would be bad and we cannot afford it

The President tells me that it was your brother (who lives in Pennsylvania) who advised your appointment Because he lives in Pennsylvania and because he believed the war for the Republic a failure in my judgment renders him incompetent to advise an appointment

You say you are a 'true friend' of the President He has reason to wish to be saved from his friends if this is so No man can be a true friend of the President who has not been true to others and who is not true to all and who has not been true to his country Truth has no special season, but has all seasons for her own it cannot be spliced with falsehood In a vulgar acceptation it is easy to be true to a President, and in this respect you may be true to him

It is scarcely possible as you seem to think, that the gentleman to whom you refer feared the power of an Assessor, as in the way of their aspirations. This misapprehension doubtless arises in your mind from a want of knowledge of your own position, and of theirs in California I scarcely think they would regard you as at all potent even with an Assessor's commission

Your difficulty, I apprehend, is the old one—a want of capacity to appreciate the importance of great political issues and a proneness to sink their consequence in the attainment of office and the consequent want of the confidence of your fellow citizens

The Memphis Avalanche states that amid all the coolness and courage displayed during the sinking of the steamer Platte Valley, in which thirty or forty lives were lost perhaps none were more striking or conspicuous than that of a woman who carried her drunken husband from the cabin to the hurricane roof, and afterwards, while the boat was rapidly submerging, entered the cabin and rescued all her children, six in number When she had accomplished this the husband rolled over and exclaimed in his drunken gutteral tone, "Darling, (hic) we're saved!" It was several times suggested to throw him overboard by the indignant passengers, but the same heroic courage which had saved him was again interposed, and he remained in his drunken stupor unmolested.

OUTRAGE IN NORTH CAROLINA.—A dispatch dated Richmond January 29th, says

From Johnson county, North Carolina I have intelligence of a contemplated outrage on the part of the civil authorities there toward a Union man who is under indictment for stealing four pounds of meat from the so called Confederate States Government (these are the exact words used in the bill), and unless the Government interferes he will be dragged to the whipping post. The accused was a conscript soldier in the rebel army, and when on duty, in 1863, while half starved, he took meat to keep life in his poor body and now will have to suffer for an act not against the law, but because he is and was a Union man.

THE TARIFF BILL has been defeated in Congress but KOHN & FISHEL of the ST LOUIS STORE 111, Front street will sell their New Stock of GENTS CLOTHING and FURNISHING GOODS at rates defying competition

LOUIS A GARNETT

LOUIS A GARNETT — President and Manager
JOHN HEWSTON Jr ...Chemist and Superintendent

THIS COMPANY HAVING GREATLY enlarged their Refining Works, and introduced many other important improvements are pleased to announce that they feel warranted in again reducing materially their terms of doing business

THE TARIFF OF CHARGES

Which they now submit to the public—considered with reference to the cost of material and labor—is lower than in any other part of the world, and secures to the mining interest of this coast an important increase in both the minting and commercial value of bullion
Their charges hereafter will be as follows

FOR ASSAYING DEPOSITS FOR UNPARTED GOLD BARS

One eighth of one per cent (heretofore a quarter) for all amounts over $1 600, and two dollars for any smaller sum Returns made in twenty four hours

FOR ASSAYING DEPOSITS FOR UNPARTED SILVER BARS

Two dollars for the gold contained up to $1 600 and one-eighth of one per cent, for all amounts over that sum and one per cent on the silver contained Returns made in twenty four hours

FOR REFINING DEPOSITS MADE FOR COIN OR FINE BARS

On bullion under 300 parts gold 2 cents per ounce.
On bullion from 300 to 600 parts gold 4 cents per ounce
On bullion from 600 to 850 parts gold, 6 cents per ounce
On bullion from 850 to 949½ parts gold 8 cents per ounce
Above 950 the only charge will be for coinage But there will be no charge for refining less than two dollars

FOR COINING GOLD

This charge will be the same as at the Mint—a half of one per cent.—and which is paid by us to that institution But there will be no charge in future for making fine gold or silver bars from bullion refined by us

RETURNS IN COIN IN FORTY EIGHT HOURS

Silver contained in deposits for coin will be accounted for at the San Francisco rates current at the Mint
Gold bars of other Assayers in good standing, will be cashed by us at the highest market rates
Dust and bullion can be forwarded to us from any part of the country and returns made through Wells Fargo & Co's Express

CHARGES AT U S BRANCH MINT

For the convenience of those not familiar with the terms of the Mint we subjoin the tariff of charges now in force at that institution
For refining bullion under 300 parts gold 3 cents per ounce
For refining bullion from 300 to 600 parts gold 5 cents per ounce
For refining bullion from 600 to 850 parts gold, 7 cents per ounce
For refining bullion from 850 to 880 parts gold 11 cents per ounce
For refining bullion from 880 to 949½ parts gold 14 cents per ounce
The charge for coinage is half of one per cent, and the charge for making fine silver bars the same
Comparing the net value of deposits for coinage with the proceeds of unparted gold bars sold in the market—assuming that the bars have cost ½ of one per cent—it must be gold at the following par rates to equal the return which would have been made had they been deposited for coinage
[illegible] par to equal Mint return at refining charge of 14 cents
845 par to equal Mint return at refining charge of 14 cents
885 par to equal San Francisco A & R Works return at refining charge of 8 cents

MARCH WINDS.—March is derived from the Latin Martius Mars, and the third month of our present calendar, consisting of thirty-one days. It was the first month in the early Roman calendar, and it also marked the commencement of the year among some of the Latin Christian nations until the 18th century. The English legal year began March 25th, until the change of style in 1752. The old English and Scottish proverb says: "March borrows three days of April and they are ill."

The first, it shall be wind and weet;
The next, it shall be snaw and sleet;
The third, it shall be sic a freeze,
Sall gar the birds stick to the trees.

It is disputed whether these "borrowing days" were the last three in March or the first three in April. Dr. J. he explains that they were stormy; March was said to borrow them from April that he might extend his power so much longer. We will not enter into any discussion with any writer as to the correct theory but content ourselves with declaring that just now we are having a regular "blow out." Hurricanes are said to prevail during this month, in all parts of the globe; and we should not be surprised to hear of disastrous effects resulting from the present "tearer" in this city. The wind for the past few days has been from the north-east, which, according to the observations of Dr. Franklin, is the point from whence this phenomena emanates. It also has the name of cyclone, tornado and monsoon, the two latter generally meaning a hurricane on land. In 1831 the British Government buildings in the Barbadoes, were utterly laid waste. In the Journal of Science, of January, 18[illegible], a hurricane is said to have reached from Honduras across Cuba and beyond Newfoundland, being a distance of over 3,000 miles. In some portions of the inhabitable globe they have to lash down their houses during the prevalence of a great gale. In 1855 one occurred in the Island of Guam, latitude 13°20' N., by which more than 6,000 persons were left without a roof to shelter them. These gales are by no means of usual occurrence in the temperate zone, in which we are situated, but are extremely common in the torrid zone or hot regions. This is a crumb of comfort we would hand out to Portlanders, who have been trying to keep "level" for the past few days.

PASSENGERS FOR SAN FRANCISCO.—The steamship Idaho, Capt. Jarvis Patten, left for San Francisco about six o'clock last evening, with the following passengers: J L McKee, E A Post, Wm Currier, H B Parkey, Miss C Kingsley, Mrs T B Trevett and child, Rev A Myers and lady, E H Waterman and lady, H P Baldwin, A W Kinsey, C Hopkins, R S McLerran, Mrs John Dement and son, Richard Eubank, John Charles, H V Sloat, J Levy McEwen, G W Burnham, D Wilson, J C Beard, H Jelinski, C Shalsbehert, W J Bollard, W H Bennett, John O'Neil, J Herbert and wife, Joseph Harrison, wife and child, Mrs E Wall and two children, Mrs Elenferst, J McKee and lady, John Holloway, wife and two children, C D Wilbur, Wm Treter, John T Shultz, J T Allen, J W Patten, H Lawson, Capt Winslow, Capt Howard, U S N, J T Willi[illegible], C Snooks, W Craig, R T Robinson, Mon[illegible], G Eckenfelts, Arthur Miller and wife, W Sisner, R [illegible], H M Robinson, and 67 others.

[illegible]—The attention of residents in the vicinity of W[illegible] and Third streets was attracted to a set-to between a citizen of African descent and a female Aborigine, [illegible] a kind of amusement not common in that quiet locality. It seems the brawny descendant of Ham had a claim upon this particular dark-eyed [illegible] of the forest, and sought to exhibit his prowess upon the street by violently seizing her person and trying to carry her off. Pocahontas immediately exhibited her fighting qualities and got in two "sockdologers" on Pompey's mug, which caused him to drop his burden like a "hot potato." Considerable skirmishing followed, with a clinch, when both "went to grass," and thus ended this [illegible] "mill." The last seen of these candidates for police [illegible], they were trudging along quietly to their rural retreat at the foot of Robinson's Hill.

[illegible]—In our rounds yesterday, we stopped aboard of the Idaho, about twelve o'clock, where we found the Captain (Patten) and his officers at lunch. By invitation, we accepted a seat at his table and partook of that lunch. Cold roasts, pastry, preserved [illegible] fruits, coffee, tea, etc., ending with two [illegible] of the finest brands of champagne constituted what may be termed a magnificent "lay out." We [illegible] ship of the style or class of the Idaho which [illegible] complete in every particular, or, where every [illegible] according to his deserts."

[illegible]—William B. Hill was tried before Recorder [illegible] day for stealing a dog from B. B. Acker. [illegible] pleaded not guilty and was acquitted by [illegible]. One of the spectators remarked to our reporter [illegible] a dog-gone interesting trial. The animal was [illegible] to the custody of the Marshal and is in jail, the ownership to be determined this morning. This [illegible] exciting dogma which has attracted the attention of the court this week.

[illegible]—A fair audience was in attendance at the [illegible] last night, and the performance elicited the [illegible]. Miss Sofield was in her element, notwithstanding the chilly atmosphere, while O'Neil and [illegible] exhibited their best acting. We noticed a new addition in the person of Senorita Juanita, who, in future, will [illegible] regularly with this troupe. To-night a new [illegible] offered, in which all the performers take part.

THE DRIVE.—The McAdamized road, from here to the [illegible] House is in excellent condition for a drive, and [illegible] who has a horse and carriage, or can get one, [illegible] the most of it. If the editorial chair does [illegible] too fast we will give somebody the benefit of [illegible] dust to-day. Ten days ago we were out and the road [illegible] good then.

[illegible] LIST OF THE FREIGHT—[illegible],000 boxes apples, 8,000 [illegible], 4 cases machinery, 300 M shingles, 13,993 [illegible], 23 bdls sheep skins, 3 cases game, 10 hf bbls [illegible], 80 sks onions, 500 bdls shooks, 62 boxes [illegible] bbls eggs, 21 cases tobacco, 23 kegs butter, [illegible] 53 bdls hoop poles, 5 bbls pitch, 324 mis[illegible].

SOCIAL THIS EVENING.—The ladies connected with the [illegible] Church, corner Washington and Third [illegible] will give a Social this evening in the basement [illegible]. A nice clam chowder, hot coffee etc., will be furnished [illegible]. Good singing and music may also be [illegible]. The public are cordially invited to be present.

[illegible]—The steamship Idaho got aground about [illegible] below town last night after clearing for San [illegible]. The river is extremely low for the season of [illegible] the ship is very heavily freighted. It is [illegible] she may have got off during the night, but is [illegible] she will have to be lightened first.

[illegible] BALL.—The "Hibernian Benevolent Society" [illegible] to give their annual ball in honor of St. Patrick, on Monday evening next, at Oro Fino Hall. All the [illegible] and lassies of the Green Isle will be there, of course, [illegible] they will have no harm the watchword will be "[illegible] go bragh."

LOTTERY.—We learn that Judge Olney, the owner [illegible] site of Astoria, will put his claim in a lottery [illegible] chances at $50 each chance. Here is a [illegible] desirous of investing in real estate. We [illegible] yet seen the scheme, but presume it is a "good

LAST NIGHT.—The lecture by Dr. Watkins, at Oro Fino Hall, was only fairly attended. It [illegible] cold—in fact freezing cold weather—prevented many from going. The lecture was [illegible] the subject handled in an able manner.

[illegible]—A subscriber asks us what the total [illegible] of five dollars assessment upon every Irishman in [illegible] States would be. If our friend will give us [illegible] number of his countrymen in the Union we will [illegible] a correct solution to his question.

[illegible]—Three young law students of this city were [illegible] to practice in the courts of Washington Territory, at Vancouver, yesterday: Lafayette Lane, W. B. [illegible] and J. C. N. Moreland. Clients will please bear this fact in mind.

THE ALERT'S FREIGHT.—The Alert, from Oregon City, [illegible] last night the following freight: 40 bbls and 15 hf bbls beef, 5 bales wool, 157 boxes apples, 1,178 [illegible] flour, 90 sks middling, 39 cases bacon and 23 cases [illegible].

[illegible] STABLE.—This stable has been purchased by [illegible] Taylor, late of Jacksonville. By reference to our advertising columns it will be seen what the new [illegible] can do for the riding public.

[illegible]—An Indian was arrested by officer Saunders for being drunk and disorderly, yesterday. Also Joe Anthony, for giving liquor to an Indian. They will be tried this morning.

FRUIT FOR MONTANA.—A number of packages of fruit for Montana Territory will be shipped this morning. The fruit is packed in pulverized charcoal, and will go [illegible] in good shape.

REAL ESTATE SALE.—A sale of the most valuable real estate in the town of St. Helens will take place at Richardson's Auction Rooms on Wednesday, March 27.

ARRIVAL OF THE AJAX.—The screw steamship Ajax arrived in San Francisco yesterday fifty-two and a half hours from the mouth of the Columbia.

CATTLE DROVES.—The streets were pretty well occupied by small bands of cattle yesterday. They will be shipped for the upper country to-day.

FOR PORTLAND.—The steamship Continental left San F[illegible] for this port yesterday, and may be looked for Saturday.

TREASURE.—A shipment of $5,000 was made by the Bank of Oregon (Ladd & Tilton) per steamship Idaho yesterday.

CALL AND SEE.—If gentlemen, whose business calls them upon the street this sharp weather, will call in at the clothing store of Barman Bros, they may be assured of [illegible] something decidedly to their advantage.

The man who said the Family Dye Colors manufactured by Howe & Stevens were the greatest discovery of the age, for domestic use, hit the nail on the head precisely. By the same line of statement, Messrs. Howe & Stevens are among the greatest benefactors of the day. The great public evidently believe in the colors, for they are to be found in about every well regulated household in the [illegible]. Sold by Smith & Davis.

The acknowledged superiority of his merchandise, which commands here, and in the markets of the interior, a relatively higher price, excites the cupidity of some manufacturers, and every day he sees increasing the number of those who, by counterfeit or imitation of his mark, seek to deceive the public, palming upon them their inferior productions for the genuine G. Snakes at Dinner

George Guyon, in a late publication gives the following curious account of the feeding of the snakes in the London Zoological Gardens

As probably not many of my readers have witnessed the operation of feeding the reptiles at the Zoological Gardens perhaps a short account of what has been seen during a visit a few weeks ago may be interesting It must be premised that the sight is not altogether an agreeable one, but notwithstanding it seemed to exercise a sort of fascination over the spectators, and some ladies who kept expressing their horror and disgust were nevertheless as eager as any to see all that was going on. One might go there many times without seeing the operation, as these creatures are only fed once a week or as the keeper said "all Fridays in the year except Good Friday"

It was quite by accident that I happened to enter the reptile house a few minutes before the feeding commenced, which was late in the afternoon Before beginning, the keeper locked the door, apparently to prevent persons from crowding in as not many can well see at the same time He then brought supplies of the different kinds of prey, and cast them into the serpents' dens, the dainty animals being young rabbits, young mice white mice, ducks fowls, sparrows and frogs which were distributed to suit the size of the various snakes, except the frogs, which were provided for the aquatic species

The large boa constrictors, into whose case three rabbits, grown specimens, were introduced seemed the principal attraction, but their mightinesses were in no hurry to dine As is generally the case after long watching, I was looking at something else when there was an exclamation, "He's got it!" and I found one of these large snakes was coiled round a rabbit. The latter, I thought, struggled a little, but it might be fancy, all remained quiet for a few minutes, and the huge reptile uncoiled himself, and the rabbit lay perfectly dead The boa showed no inclination to eat its victim, but glided about in a languid manner after the other rabbits, who showed little sense of their danger It was curious to see them in happy ignorance sniffing at their dead companion or putting up their noses to a hand held near the glass Two ducks were introduced into the den of another large boa, or rather, I believe it was a python, which is the boa constrictor of the old world, and similar in size and habits

He moved slowly after the birds, which showed more fear than the rabbits, but made no attempt to seize them While leaning over the bar to observe better, two or three loud thumps sounded on the glass front near my head, and some bystanders expressed fear lest the glass should be broken The attack was so sudden that it was only when the keeper requested me to stand further back that I was conscious that the big snake preferred me to ducks The blows sounded like that of a man's fist, and would probably throw a man down if they took effect By the quick repetition of the strokes, it seemed the reptile was slow to learn that the plate [illegible] was too strong for its efforts I regretted afterward not having estimated the size of this python at the time but from memory should imagine it to be nine or ten feet long

Next to these large snakes, the venomous kinds seemed to attract most attention. Some rabbits, so young as to be almost helpless, were dropped into the cases of the rattlesnake and puff-adder They were soon struck, but the venom was much slower in its action than I should have expected The bite of both these species is said to be fatal to man, yet these small animals survived, about twenty minutes The bites were effectively given, as in one instance the blood oozed from punctures, and in another it flowed from the nose and mouth I paid particular attention to the act of striking, having understood that our English viper does not, strictly speaking bite—that is, does not close the jaws, but with the mouth wide open, drives in the fangs by a downward stroke of the upper jaw like the blow of a hammer The puff adder, however, appeared to seize its prey with a momentary grip, leaving go immediately

A half grown rabbit was given to another venomous species—I think a "horned viper," but though the poor little animal was repeatedly pushed up against the reptile, the latter would not strike Every effort was made to irritate it, and it frequently turned round vengefully, hissing like a small steam engine all the time, but it would not use its weapons The "glass snakes" appeared more ready to feed than most of the others Mice were provided for their refection, and one of them disposed of two or three in rapid succession Shortly after, happening to pass the python's den, a bang on the glass apprised me that my Ophidian friend was still bent on making a closer acquaintance

A stout gentleman who frequently expressed his antipathies to the whole serpent tribe, took occasion by this fresh attack to utter some words of warning, reminding me of the keeper's request to keep back from the case and remarked that the glasses I had on at the time were probably the attraction I replied that the reptile was apparently in a state to strike at anything that came within reach, and two minutes had scarcely elapsed when my friend, with his little boy, crossed in front of the den, when the python made a similar show at him His alarm was ludicrous With an exclamation of intense horror, he staggered back half a dozen paces, but I fear his activity would have availed but little but for the stout plate glass between. The evident desire of this monster to get a human victim, while it ignored the ducks within its reach, seemed to indicate a longing for larger prey. It was difficult to imagine that the snake could really swallow a man, but the peculiar structure of the jaws in the boa tribe, and the immense power of expansion, enable them to get down animals of bulk much exceeding their own When these creatures were gliding about their dens great play of muscle was observable through the skins

During the performance a large box was brought in by two laborers It had apertures for ventilation, and contained some large rock snakes The keeper raised the lid and touched one of the reptiles, which were in a half torpid condition This excited the curiosity of one of the workmen who inquired anxiously, "they ben't alive sir, be they?" "Alive? yes," said the keeper, "do you want to have one out?" "Oh no sir!" and he and his companion were gone in an instant The cobra seems to be one of the most irritable species the glass front to its case is partially whitewashed to hide approaching objects from it, but notwithstanding this it strikes against the glass so frequently that its muzzle is quite raw

I took the opportunity of asking the keeper if he had ever observed the boas lick their prey before swallowing it, as they are popularly believed to do so He replied, as was expected that in several years' experience he had never seen it done It is not improbable I think that, while the boa is examining its recently killed prey to commence the swallowing operation in the most convenient manner, it may keep flickering its tongue in and out, as most serpents are in the habit of doing and this might give an inaccurate observer the idea that it was licking its prey I fear this account may appear tediously minute but I send it on the chance of interesting some who have never been present at a serpent's dinner hour

Irish Election Placards—Some of the placards used in the late Waterford election were very inflammatory, the following for example "People of Waterford—In the olden time the Beresford bloodhounds hunted your forefathers into untimely and bloody graves! Who raised the triangle in the county of Waterford? Who used the pitch cap and the gibbet the cat, and the cat o' nine tails? The Beresfords? What did O'Connell say of them in 1826? The Beresfords, who were never known to smile except when their victim was writhing on the gibbet! The Election—Black Sheep A full list of the names of those who voted against conscience and country will be published in placards through the city and country immediately after the election"

Devil Fish of the North Pacific

An Englishman, Mr Lord, has published in London a book on British Columbia, in which he gives this description of the devil fish

The octopus as seen on our coasts, although even here called a "man sucker" by the fishermen is a mere Tom Thumb a tiny dwarf as compared to the Brobdingnagian proportions he attains in the snug bays and long inland canals along the east side of Vancouver Island as well as on the mainland These places afford lurking dens, strong holds, and natural sea nurseries where the octopus grow to enormous size fattens and wages war with insatiable voracity on all and everything it can catch Safe from heavy breakers it lives as in an aquarium of smooth inlet like water that save in the ebbing and flowing of the tide knows no change or disturbance

The ordinary resting place of this hideous sea beast is under a large stone or in the wide cleft of a rock where an octopus can creep and squeeze itself with the fitness of a [illegible] or the [illegible] porpoise than eel Its mode of locomotion is curious and varied using the eight arms as paddles and working them alternately the central disk representing a boat octopi row themselves along with an ease and celerity comparable to the many oared canoe that glides over the tranquil waters of the Bosphorus They can ramble at will over the sandy roadways, intersecting their submarine parks, and converting arms into legs march on like a huge spider Gymnasts of the highest order they climb the slippery ledges as flies walk up a window pane attaching the countless suckers that arm the terrible limbs to the face of the rocks or to the wrack and seaweed they go about, back downward like marine sloths, or clinging with one arm to the waving algae perform a series of trapeze movements that Leotard might view with envy

I have often when on the rocks in Esquimault harbor, watched my friend's proceedings the water being clear and still it was just like peering into an aquarium of huge proportions crowded with endless varieties of huge sea monsters although grotesque and ugly to look at yet all alike displaying the wondrous works of creative wisdom In all the cozy little nooks and corners of the harbor the great sea wrack—Macrocystis—grows wildly having a great round stem that comes up from the bottom often with a stalk 300 feet long reaching the surface it spreads out two long tapering leaves that float upon the water—This sea forest is the favorite hunting ground of the octopi

I do not think in its native element an octopus often catches prey on the ground or on the rocks but waits for them just as a spider does only the octopus converts itself into a web and a fearful web, too Fastening one arm on a stout stalk stiffening of the other seven one would hardly know it from the wrack among which it is concealed Patiently he bides his time until presently a shoal of fish come gaily on, threading their way through the sea trees joyously happy, and little dreaming that this lurking monster so artfully concealed is close at hand Two or three of them rub against the arms fatal touch! As though a powerful electric shock had passed through the fish and suddenly knocked it senseless, so does the arm of the octopus paralyze its victim, and then winding a great sucker clad cable around the palsied fish—as an elephant winds his trunk around anything to be taken to the mouth—draws the dainty morsel to the center of the disk where the beaked mouth seizes it and soon sucks it in

By a sort of poetical justice, these tyrants of the sea caverns are themselves hunted by an enemy of untiring pertinacity The Indian regards the octopus as a great delicacy especially when its huge glutinous body is carefully roasted Were the octopus once to get his long thong like feelers over the side of the canoe, and at the same time retain a hold on the seawrack, it could as easily haul it over as a child could a basket This the crafty Indian well knows How he captures him Mr Lord thus describes

Paddling the canoe close to the rocks and quietly pushing aside the wrack, the savage peers through the crystal water until his practiced eye detects an octopus with its great rope like arms stiffened out, waiting patiently for food His spear is twelve feet long, armed at the end with four pieces of hard wood made harder by being baked and charred by the fire, these project about fourteen inches beyond the spear haft each piece having a barb on one side and are arranged in a circle round the spear end, and lashed firmly on with cedar bark Having spied out the octopus the hunter passes the spear carefully through the water until within an inch or so of the center disk and then sends it in as deep as he can plunge it Writhing with pain and passion, the octopus coils its terrible arms around the haft Redskin making the side of the canoe a fulcrum for his spear, keeps the struggling monster well off, and raises it to the surface of the water He is dangerous now. If he could get a holdfast on either savage or canoe, nothing short of chopping off the arms piecemeal would be of any avail

But the wily redskin knows all this, and has taken care to have ready another spear, unbarbed long straight, smooth and very sharp, and with this he stabs the octopus where the arms join the central disk I suppose the spear must break the nervous ganglions supplying motive power as the stabbed arms lose at once strength and tenacity, the suckers that a moment before held on with a force that ten men could not have overcome, relax and the entire ray hangs like a dead snake, a limp lifeless mass And thus the Indian stabs and stabs, until the octopus deprived of all power to do harm is dragged into the canoe a great, limp, quivering lump of brown looking jelly

An Anecdote Worth Preserving—A Paris correspondent guarantees the following

A Frenchman a prisoner in Edinburgh, having managed to escape took refuge in the powder magazine When the authorities wished to seize him, they found him sitting on a barrel with a lighted match and threatening to blow up the town The authorities reflected prudently, and the result of their deliberations was that it would be better to starve the Frenchman out But they reckoned without their prisoner who loved good cheer and was determined to live well In consequence he called out that he would blow the town to pieces if he did not get three meals a day he would write out the bill of fare Sawney succumbed, and the demand of the prisoner went on increasing Sometimes he had a serenade under his window, then a review of the garrison, after wards a sham fight in which the troops representing the French army beat the Highlanders At last he exacted that every Sabbath morning before breakfast the Lord Provost in full uniform, should make his appearance and read him an address This lasted until the allies entered Paris

Pensions.—Not the least among the expenses of war is that of pensions to disabled soldiers, and of widows and orphans of those who died in service At the last report the annual sum for pensions was eleven million four hundred and thirteen thousand one hundred and twenty two dollars The whole number on the pension roll is one hundred and twenty four thousand persons the larger proportion of whom are widows and orphans The number will probably be increased before it begins to diminish but let it become ever so large it is one of the so sacred obligations which must be religiously observed

Church Property—There are in the United States 11,220 Baptist churches valued at $8,0[illegible] 000 19,8[illegible] Methodist churches worth $33 000 000 5 051 Presbyterian churches at $23 305 000 2 334 Congregational churches at $14 014 000 2 250 Catholic churches at $22 500 000 2 145 Episcopal churches at $21 450 000 440 German Reformed churches at $4 400 000, and 264 Unitarian churches, at $4 58[illegible] 000

Daniel Webster

The following incidents are related by Parton in his late article on Webster

WEBSTER'S COLLISION WITH RANDOLPH

One of the minor triumphs of Webster's early Congressional life was his conquest of the heart of John Randolph In the course of a debate on the sugar tax, in 1816 Mr Webster had the very common fortune of offending the irascible member from Virginia, and Mr Randolph as his custom was, demanded an explanation of the offensive words Explanation was refused by the member from Massachusetts, whereupon Mr Randolph demanded the satisfaction which his insulted feelings required Mr Webster's reply to this preposterous demand was everything that it ought to have been He told Mr Randolph that he had no right to an explanation and that the temper and style of the demand were such as to forbid its being conceded as a matter of courtesy He denied too, the right of any man to call him to the field for what he might please to consider an insult to his feelings although he should be always prepared to repel in a suitable manner the aggression of any man who may presume upon a refusal The eccentric Virginian was so much pleased with Mr Webster's bearing on this occasion that he manifested a particular regard for him, and pronounced him a very able man for a Yankee

MR WEBSTER IN BOSTON

When he appeared in State street, slowly pacing with an arm behind him, business was brought to an absolute standstill As the whisper passed along, the windows filled with clerks pen in mouth, peering out to catch a glimpse of the man whom they had seen fifty times before, while the bankers and merchants hastened forth to give him salutation or exchange a passing word happy if they could but catch his eye

HOW HE LOOKED IN THE HAYNE DEBATE

But even the artist was apparent in all that he did, and particularly in the dress which he wore At that time in his forty eighth year, his hair was still as black as an Indian's and it lay in considerable masses about the spacious dome of his forehead His form had neither the slenderness of his youth nor the elephantine magnitude of his later years It was fully but finely developed, imposing and stately, yet not wanting in alertness and grace. No costume could have been better suited to it than his blue coat and glittering gilt buttons his ample yellow waistcoat his black trowsers and snowy cravat It was in a due degree perhaps owing to the elegance and distinctness of his dress that, while New England men among his hearers were moved to tears many Southern members like Col Benton regarded the speech merely as a Fourth of July oration delivered on the 6th of January

WEBSTER IN YOUTH

Daniel Webster, a schoolmaster and law student was assuredly one of the most interesting of characters Pinched by poverty as he tells us till his bones ached [illegible] but his income by a [illegible] of labor that he always loathed (copying deeds) his shoes letting in not water merely, but pebbles and stones—father, brother, and [illegible] if sometimes all moneyless together all dunned at the same time and writing to one another for aid—he was nevertheless as jovial a young fellow as any in New England How merry and affectionate his letters to his young friends! He writes to one soon after leaving college You will naturally inquire how I prosper in the article of cash finely! I came here in January with a horse watch [illegible] and a few rascally coppers in my pockets Was soon obliged to sell my horse and live on the proceeds Still straitened for cash I sold my watch and made a shift to get home where my friends supplied me with another horse and another watch My horse is sold again and watch going "I expect this week" thus you see how I lay up cash " How [illegible]

Israel Putnam and the Bird's Nest—On one occasion he and his companions came across a fine nest which lodged on a frail limb of a very high tree There was no way of reaching the nest except by climbing (which was very difficult) and venturing out on the branch which nine chances to one, would break under the weight of the robber No one would venture Putnam regarded the nest and limb in silence for some moments, and at length said

"I'll wager there is not a boy for ten miles around that can get that nest"

All agreed with him

"I'll try it" said he deliberately taking off his jacket and rolling his pantaloons up to his knees

His companions tried to dissuade him but to no purpose, go he would

"I fancy that one of the limbs strong [illegible]" said Putnam "and may I be blessed if I don't take it"

The tree was ascended—the limb gained Putnam placed his foot upon it and it [illegible] He ventured a foot farther the limb bent low and a warning murmur rose from the boys below He put his face to the branch and reached towards the nest The limb broke partly—a slight [illegible] below—but Putnam persevered His fingers touched the wished for prize and just as he [illegible] I've got it the limb broke clear off and he fell—but not to the ground His pantaloons caught in one of the lower limbs and his head hung down wards

"Put are you hurt?" asked one of the boys

"Not hurt" answered the undaunted heart "but sorely puzzled how to get down"

"We can't cut away the limb, because we have no knife"

"I can't stay here till you get one"

"We'll strike a light and burn the tree down"

"Ay, and smother me in the smoke That won't do"

There was a boy named Randall in the group, who was noted for being a crack marksman, and who afterwards fought bravely at Putnam's side. Him Putnam addressed

"Jim Randall there's a ball in your rifle" "Yes"

"Do you see that very little limb holding me?" "[illegible]"

"Fire at it"

"What to [illegible] you down?"

"Of course"

"What if I [illegible] strike your head"

"[illegible] Better [illegible] brain than see me hold [illegible] which I shall in fifteen minutes Shoot"

"But [illegible]"

"Jim Randall! Will you fire"

The sharp crack of the rifle rang through the forest—the splinters flew—and Putnam fell upon the ground He was severely bruised but laughed the matter of [illegible] nothing more was thought of it [illegible]

[illegible] I was determined to [illegible] nest [illegible]

A [illegible] the prisoners at Chatham England were recently sentenced to death for killing the warder [illegible] In his statement before the magistrate the [illegible] said "There is no [illegible] the prisoners [illegible] for regularly eat candles [illegible] feelings [illegible] any thing they can get hold of and drink the oil out of the [illegible] I do not wish to say any more now"

It was recently decided in the New York Court of Common Pleas that the liability of a baggage express company was not limited by the words ex[illegible] will not be liable for an amount exceeding fifty dollars on any article and that the [illegible] applies to each piece [illegible] the contents of the trunk and not the trunk itself

There are signs of social reform in Mississippi The Vicksburg Herald says that several parties who have recently been engaged in duels in that county have been indicted by the grand jury of the county and bound over in the sum of one thousand dollars each to answer for the offense

my3 1m PHILIP SCHAD,

GOOD GRUB AND PLENTY OF IT!

AT THE

Bennett House,

SALEM OREGON

L. JAY S. TURNEY,

HAVING LEASED THE ABOVE NAMED HOTEL, is prepared to accommodate the travelling public, and ONE HUNDRED REGULAR BOARDERS in as good style as any House on the Coast He has determined to make the Bennett as good as the best and better than any public house in Salem He will soon complete some important improvements, which will add greatly to its appearance and comfort, and intends to merit and hopes to receive his share of patronage

He has secured the services of "Charley" (known to be the best cook in Salem and one of the best in the whole country) and other competent persons to manage the culinary department and is resolved to set as good a table as can be found anywhere—not in clap-trap, pomp and show finery and fine furniture but in an abundant supply of the very best the market affords

His bar room will be kept warmed and lighted and well supplied with newspapers periodicals and other suitable reading matter and kept in a manner which will make it an agreeable resort

In short he intends making an effort to please ALL who stop at the BENNETT HOUSE And he most respectfully requests his friends everywhere to give the old and well known stand at least one more trial before concluding they can do as well elsewhere, and promises if they are not well treated and properly cared for and at reasonable figures it will not be the fault of the public's most obedient and most humble servant
